Lööpa Bowl

Age: Toddlers

Mum & Dad team Melinda and Brad invented the Loopa bowl after their little one spilt food all over the car for the umpteenth time. With Melinda's creative concept and Brad an engineer, the bowl was born. It's revolutionary spill-resistant technology utilises a weighted inner bowl that rotates 360 degree, swivelling, oscillating and dipping to keep the snacks inside until they're gobbled up. It's bright & cool looking to boot. My bub did eventually manage to upturn his sultanas, but I must admit it took a lengthy bout of sheer determination, and there weren't many left by the time he'd managed.

Price: $9.99 + postage

My Organiser

Age: 3 months - 18 months

I've been known to lurk the Home Organiser forum because I love being organised! Or at least attempting it most of the time. I'm putting my faith in My Organiser for 2009 to keep me on top of everything (housework not included). This organiser sounds perfect for families – it has a week to view diary and has tabbed sections to organise everything from bills (due this week), school & sports info, contacts, what's for dinner (great for meal planning), a to-do list, receipts and pockets for storing your paperwork. Once you've bought the complete edition you can update it by buying yearly refills. Sounds like I'll have no excuse!

Price: $49.95 (complete), $29.95 yearly refills

Gabba Gabba DVD

In the tradition of Barney and Friends, Yo Gabba Gabba! is a fun way for your young children to learn. Aimed at ages one and up, this DJ Lance Rock-hosted show features friendly toy monsters in cheery colourful environments filled with music, dance. It's not every day a kids' show gets profiled in rock mag Spin, has guests such as Jack Black and sells their songs on iTunes. The show is featured on Foxtel and now out on DVD.
